

Wanted: 20 people to help change
the World.

Asia's future leaders will face many challenges. The first is gaining admission.

Master in Public Management

With only 20 places available in the Lee Kuan Yew School of Public Policy's Master in Public Management programme, competition will be fierce.

Our exclusive one-year Master in Public Management is targeted at senior policymakers in the public and private sector and civil society with a proven track record of leadership in their organisations. It is designed to intellectually invigorate and equip them with the latest thinking and best practices in public policy.

The programme offers candidates a unique opportunity to spend a semester studying at the Lee Kuan Yew School in Singapore, and the second semester at Harvard or Columbia University.

Full scholarships are available for successful applicants. Applications are now open. For more information and application details, visit www.lkyspp.nus.edu.sg
