

JOANNA LEE

MASTER IN PUBLIC POLICY CANDIDATE

Lee Kuan Yew School of Public Policy

Joanna Lee has internship experience in the public sector. Previously, she interned with the Ministry of Finance, where she analysed the benefit withdrawal effects of social assistance schemes in Singapore. She was also an intern to the Ministry of Trade and Industry, where she conducted econometrics research on government procurement chapters in free trade agreements. Driven by her passion for migrant communities and healthcare, she volunteers with HealthServe, an organisation that provides medical care and social assistance to migrant workers. She aspires to apply her public policy training to designing solutions that will improve the health of communities in need.
