

NICHOLAS FANG

DIRECTOR, SECURITY AND GLOBAL AFFAIRS

Singapore Institute of International Affairs

Nicholas Fang graduated from Oxford University with a Masters in Politics, Philosophy and Economics. He joined Singapore's oldest think tank, the Singapore Institute of International Affairs, in 2010. He is currently Director, Security and Global Affairs, at the Institute. Nicholas started his working life as a journalist, and spent nine years at Singapore's national daily newspaper, The Straits Times, reporting on financial and sports news, and writing lifestyle columns and special reports on a diverse range of topics, while rising to the post of Senior Correspondent. He then spent two years as Business Desk Editor at national broadcaster Mediacorp's Channel NewsAsia. During this time, he oversaw local and business news coverage, and also presented various key bulletins. He was most recently Deputy Chief Editor of Singapore news at Mediacorp. He was appointed Nominated Member of Parliament in February 2012, and served a two-and-a-half-year term where he focused on issues pertaining to international affairs, media, defence and security, and sports. He is currently a member of the advisory committee of the national youth volunteerism institution Youth Corps Singapore. He also chairs Singapore Defence Ministry's expert panel for strategic communications. Nicholas is founder and managing director of Black Dot Pte Ltd, a strategic communications consultancy, and Black Dot Research, a market research agency which offers fact-checking capabilities to address the rising threat of fake news.
