Circles are part of something bigger

We all want to live in the place we call home with the people and things that we love, in communities where we look out for one another, doing the things that matter to us

Frozen system – how to start a thaw?

- Main models of support little changed in decades
- Context of austerity, some attempts at system change “promoting independence”,
- Attempts to describe an “asset based system”

BRIEFING DOCUMENT

The Asset-Based Area

Engaging and Empowering Communities: our shared commitment and call to action underlines the sector's commitment as national bodies to develop strong and inclusive communities. This briefing, which has been written by Alex Fox CEO of Shared Lives Plus and chair of TLAP Building Community Capacity network, sets out ten key features of an asset-based area. It also suggests a number of planning and support models that can help areas to make progress.

Who is this document for?

This briefing will be of interest to all of those working in the sector, with including social workers, Adult Social Care, Public Health and Housing colleagues, Local Authority and Central Governmenting Group Strategic Commissioners, Youth Justice, Volunteering and Development, Parks and accessible Care Systems, GP practices, voluntary and community social enterprises, health and education, and all other national groups.

In an age of austerity, increasing attention is paid to what councils and the NHS cannot do, making it vital to gain some clarity on what the organisations and people of each area can do. Every area and its citizens can achieve more when they combine their expertise, time, creativity and resources.

Decades of practice and research shows that this happens when:

- Everyone shares an asset-based mindset seeking first for what individuals, families and communities can, or could do, with the right support, rather than focussing exclusively on needs and problems.

- Services and organisations are co-produced with the people whose lives they touch. This means that everyone involved identifies priorities, co-designs services and systems, and works together whenever possible to co-deliver the work that takes place.

Every area already has at least some organisations, professionals and local people who take these approaches, but for them to have a wider and deeper impact, whole systems and areas need to be aligned around an asset-based approach. Many asset-based practitioners agree that

Innovations in community-centred support

Essence of a Community Circle

- A Circle is based on what matters to the person – the purpose
- The person is at the centre of their Circle, with those who love and care for them, supported by a volunteer
- Everyone has something to contribute
- Circles help people feel more connected
- Circles make changes
- Circles use tools and ways of recording information to support the conversation to plan and review action

Where can Circles work?

Wherever people are looking for a way of helping people achieve, connection, inclusion, purpose – for themselves or others

- Families
- Community and voluntary groups, including faith groups
- Local charity services
- Support provider organisations

Can combine well with other ways of supporting people to connect and flourish – exploring alignment with Keyring, Shared Lives, Timebanks, Wellbeing Teams

What is the basic model?

- Connectors recruit, train and support volunteer facilitators who help the Circle come together, share ideas and develop actions
- Family, friends and neighbours make up the Circle

Connectors are either paid or voluntary, with different models appropriate for different situations

BUT The model is flexible and is often adjusted to circumstances

Thinking about embedding...

What are you trying to achieve?

Commissioner?

How can you support this?

Organisation?

Do you have existing volunteers?

Could their role be adapted?

Do you have capacity in team for the Connector role?

Do you have clarity of goals and purpose?

Our approach

- We transfer (in various ways) our knowledge, tools and materials to others who can find Circles or some of the methods helpful
- We don't rival or replace – where invited we compliment
- Grow a community of practice for mutual support
- Connect with other approaches and initiatives aimed at growing the strength and connections of people and communities

How can Community Circles help?

Depending on local context:

- Provide free do it yourself materials (usually for families)
- Support design and set up of initiatives/embedding of approaches that either focus on Circles or include them
- Train on use of tools and share materials and experience
- Support families, local leaders, key staff
- Support local hubs and networks developing Circles or wider person and community centred approaches
- Partnership programme (training plus bespoke consultancy)
- Bespoke organisational partnership
