Session 1: Rule of Law and Our Economy

This session will unpack how Singapore's commitment to the Rule of Law and our world-class legal system have powered Singapore's economic progress and enabled Singapore to become a global hub for trade, services, finance, technology and innovation.

In particular, this session will explore how Singapore's legal system and frameworks have made Singapore an attractive destination for businesses to thrive and resolve disputes, while benefitting and protecting business-owners, employees and consumers.

The session will also explore how these principles have helped Singapore weather global economic crises and remain competitive, and how they continue to underpin our resilience and adaptability in an era of rapid technological and market shifts.

Session 2: Breakout Sessions

Track 1: Artificial Intelligence and Digital Assets – Shaping Tomorrow's Digital World

AI and digital assets, like cryptocurrency, are reshaping our economy, jobs, education, and daily lives – bringing immense opportunities, but also new risks and responsibilities. How can policymakers, institutions, communities, and individuals ensure that technological advances are used, regulated, and promoted ethically, transparently and inclusively? What role should the law play in driving innovation while ensuring responsible technological governance and adoption? Youth voices will take centre stage as we discuss what youths are doing – and can do – to shape laws, guidelines and policies which champion fairness and build a digital future that strengthens public trust.

Track 2: Stewarding Tomorrow's Environment

Environmental protection and climate change are defining challenges for this generation and beyond. This track will examine the governance and legal levers that support environmental action in Singapore, and how effective these approaches are in driving long-term, sustainable change while balancing other development needs. The session will also discuss practical steps that youths can take to build greener communities and advocate for impactful environmental laws and policies – shaping the Singapore they want to see for the future.

Track 3: Online Harms, Freedom of Speech and Digital Citizenship

The advent of the Internet and social media has turbocharged communications and ushered in an era of unprecedented connectivity, transforming the way we live, learn and interact. However, the digital world can sometimes appear lawless, as bad actors exploit technology to perpetrate scams, cyber-bully, distribute non-consensual sexual content (including child abuse, revenge porn and deepfakes) and wage disinformation campaigns. Our youths are especially vulnerable, as digital natives who spend significant time online. How can laws and governance frameworks uphold accountability and behavioural norms online, safeguard trust and balance freedom of expression with the need to prevent harm? How can personal responsibility be enhanced? This track will explore how different stakeholders – including the Government, industry partners, community organisations, and individuals – can strengthen trust, prevent harm and secure remedies in the digital world; and how the next generation can navigate the online space safely and responsibly as empowered digital citizens.

Track 4: Social Diversity and Inclusivity

Singapore's strength lies in its diversity and multiculturalism – but how do we preserve our harmonious coexistence despite our differences? This track will explore potential faultlines in our society (such as race and religion, socioeconomic inequality, and other markers of identity); explore how the Rule of Law has enabled Singapore to build a cohesive society despite our diversity; and evaluate how our measures can evolve to meet new challenges, norms and evolving values.

Track 5: Youth Voice & Civic Engagement

What role should and can youths play in shaping Singapore's future – and how can their voices translate into real impact? This track will explore how institutions and participatory frameworks grounded in the Rule of Law enable constructive youth participation in policymaking, uphold accountability and balance diverse views, and how youths can engage meaningfully in policymaking and governance. It will discuss practical avenues for engagement, how institutions, communities and youths can partner, and how youths are contributing and can contribute to building a society anchored on shared values, responsibility and active citizenship.
